Is Gentrification L.A.'s Next Defining Issue?

Tuesday, June 16, 2015 7:30 PM

A Zócalo/UCLA event

Moderated by Saul Gonzalez, News Producer, KCRW

Location:

Museum of Contemporary Art

250 S. Grand Ave.

Los Angeles, CA

Parking $9 at the Walt Disney Concert Hall garage. Enter from Second St., just west of Grand Ave.

After 40 years of inexorable “white flight,” Los Angeles is growing noticeably more Anglo, from the bars of Koreatown to the high fences of Boyle Heights. Many college-educated young suburbanites are settling into the city’s center while working-class urban-dwellers are feeling the squeeze of higher housing costs. Depending on who you talk to, this change amounts to a revival—or a travesty. But whether you are for or against gentrification, what does it really mean for the city? How will this demographic shift shape the city’s culture? Will a gentrified Los Angeles change our voting patterns?

And, will the growing fight over gentrification become the next hot-button political issue? UCLA cityLAB director Dana Cuff, Former City Planning Commissioner and UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs alumna Maria Cabildo, The Actors Fund Western Region director Keith McNutt, and urban planner Gilda Haas visit Zócalo to discuss how gentrification is changing and challenging Los Angeles.
